Roll-out of an Operational Excellence program across a chemical manufacturing site

Translating innovation into practical application and effective continuous improvement (CI) are essential if a western chemical manufacturing site wants to be successful and have a long term future. Currently, Operational Excellence programs are used to introduce new ways of working and continuous improvement tools in order to deliver improvement in performance. However sustainable change is only possible with the support and transformation of employees at all levels in parallel. This presentation will show a typical case study of the transformation of chemical production using an Operational Excellence approach.
